THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

Wherefore the United States of America

do hereby declare their independence of Great Britain, that they are free, sovereign and independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the said Kingdom of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as a free and independent State, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent States may lawfully do.

And for the support of this Declaration, we the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, solemnly appeal to the Supreme Judge of the world for their judgment.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hands and seals the third day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-two.

Attest: John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
